

Policy for use of Select Fire/Fully-Automatic Firearms

South Kent Sportsman's Club (SKSC)
Effective 10-January-2005

Preface

Statement of Need: In keeping with SKSC by-laws and other policy, the Club seeks to provide opportunities for use of all legal firearms.

This policy statement provides guidance concerning additional rules pertaining to, and authorizations needed for, use of Select Fire/Fully Automatic firearms.

For purposes of this policy these firearms, as defined below, are also known as:

- Submachine Guns
- Select Fire Rifles and Carbines
- Machine Guns
- Other Automated Firearms

Definitions

Submachine Gun (SMG) - Firearms designed for "pistol" cartridges. SMG are normally air cooled, hand held, and fed from a box or drum magazine. Generally, SMG use cartridges with "straight wall" cases, but some do use "bottle neck" cases for cartridges that were originally designed for handguns such as the .30 Mauser or 7.62x25mm Tokarev.

Select Fire Rifles and Carbines - Firearms designed for "sub-rifle" cartridges or smaller "bottle neck" rifle cartridges. They are normally air cooled, hand held, and fed from a detachable box or drum magazine. Examples of these firearms and cartridges include US .30 M-1 Carbine, 7.62x39mm, and .223 Rem (5.56mm NATO). Note that firearms using 308 Win (7.62 NATO), and 30-06 are not considered Select Fire Rifles and Carbines for these purposes.

Machine Gun (MG) - Firearms designed for "high power rifle" or similar specialty cartridges. They are designed to be fired from the ground (using a bipod or tripod), a vehicle, or aircraft, can be either air or water cooled, and are fed using belted ammunition or bulk ammunition hoppers. Examples of these firearms and cartridges include US .30 M-60 Machine Gun, .US .50 M-2 Machine Gun, 308 Win (7.62 NATO), and 30-06.

Other Automated Firearms - Firearms designed - or adapted using mechanical attachments - for lengthy or sustained fire. Such firearms include Gatling Guns as well as semi-automatic firearms equipped with devices used to fire multiple rounds with a single trigger pull - or other action - that manipulates the trigger repeatedly.
